

After all these years, the abortion industry is still hanging its argument on this.

AFTER MORE THAN 25 YEARS, abortion proponents continue to claim that if legal abortion on demand is revoked, women will use abortion methods involving a coat hanger or some similar instrument. They've continued to use this false image to scare women, while downplaying blatant cases of medical incompetence and the deliberate disregard for human life involved in so-called "safe and legal" abortions. Consider the 13-year-old who entered a Chicago clinic a pregnant, scared little girl, and left a corpse, the result of a legal abortion (Chicago Tribune, 9/6/92). Or the story of the 21-year-old, who died from a blood infection after a legal abortion at a clinic in Miami. Her uterus was perforated in two places and she was suffering from septic shock (The Wall Street Journal, 7/31/96).

Abortion on demand has not been a milestone in women's rights or women's health, but it has been a tombstone for over 36 million unborn children.

It's time for the abortion industry to hang this argument up.
